

THE NEW-YORK TRIBUNE
Is published every morning, at No. 30 Ann Street, New-York, and delivered to City Subscribers for FIVE CENTS per week. Single copies Two Cents. All Subscribers, $1 per annum, in advance, and the paper is so case bound beyond the time for which it is paid, Subscriptions taken for Six Months.

Terms of Advertising.—For an Advertiser appearing once, or six first insertion,..... 50 Cents.
..... for each subsequent insertion,..... 25 "..... for SIX insertions, or one week,..... $1 50 "
..... for TWENTY-FIVE insertions,..... 5 00 "

Larger Advertisements at equally favorable rates.

Mortgaged Bonds and Funeral Notices, not exceeding

Twenty-five cents.

The WEEKLY TRIBUNE, a very large paper, for the country, is published every Saturday morning, at the low price of $2 per annum, in advance.

THE TRIBUNE.

Glances at the Senate.—No. 5.

THOMAS H. BENTON of Missouri enjoys no sort of consideration at Washington commensurate with the swell he raises at a distance. In person he is gross, burly and of countenance most unimpressive; in manner pompous and inflated; in matter empty; in conceit a giant; in influence a cipher. He manifests considerable shrewdness in his appeals to popular ignorance and the lower instincts of humanity—witness his late attack on the Whigs concerning $40,000 worth of books which were purchased and distributed by the last Low-Face Congress. Statesmanship is not in him; even in negotiation and destruction he but follows instinct, not, like Calhoun, a theory. His great hobby is to be the hardest Hard-Money man and the bluntest anti-Protectionist in Congress.—By those who know him well, he is not esteemed, even apart from politics, a man of moral honesty. As a debater in the Senate he has no force; his principal forte being the parading in the Globe of heavy columns of statistics and figures of which he comprehends neither the bearing nor the force.

Col. Benton served in the last War, and was then involved in a ferocious feud with Gen. Jackson, who assailed him with pistols in his hotel in Nashville with a savagery which no provocation could justify. Several shots were fired by the parties on either side, but no one was dangerously wounded, and the fight was ended by the discharge of all the pistols carried by either party. The feud continued, however, at least as late as 1824, when Benton publicly proclaimed that, if Jackson were chosen President, Members of Congress would be forced to legislate with pistols in their belts. Col. Benton was, throughout the contest of 1824, a supporter of Mr. Clay for President, and a member of the Clay Central Committee of Missouri. Soon after the election of Mr. Adams, however, he united in the heterogeneous condition which rallied under the banners of Jackson and Calhoun, and has ever since been a drill-sargent among them. In 1827 he was a member of the famous Committee of Retrenchment which reported that the Government was shamefully extravagant in its expenditure of Thirteen Millions per annum, and that its patronage and expenses might be greatly reduced. About the same time he wrote to the Richmond Enquirer a startling account of the gorgeous furniture of the President's House, and especially of the great East Room—said room being at that time not furnished at all. This is but an everyday leaf from the volume of his life.

Mr. Benton came into the Senate upon the admission of Missouri into the Union—10-21—and has been three times reelected; so that he is now the oldest constant possessor of a seat in the Senate, unless Mr. King of Alabama may share with him the distinction. In this fortune he has been favored by the character of his constituency, forming the vanguard and skirmishers of Western progress; many of them relying on the documents he sends them for their political information, and scarcely seeing any beside. He understands the art of speaking and legislating “for Bumcombe,” and his Preemption and Graduation projects are exactly calculated to extend and deepen his popularity on the wild prairies of Missouri. Around St. Louis he is better known. Of late years, however, he has hardly visited Missouri at all, remaining with his family near Washington from Session to Session, taking care to charge ample mileage for his consecutive journeys back and forward—sometimes charging around by New-Orleans in order to swell his emoluments by a round thousand. That such a man contrives to preserve a reputation among even a moderate portion of our countrymen is considerably less creditable than amazing. But,

“It is distance lends enchantment to the view.”

Cousin Lucy on the Sea-Shore.—By the Author of “The Roll-Boats.” Appleton, 200 Broadway.

Cousin Lucy among the Mountains.—By the same.

These are two clever stories descriptive of Life and Nature, by one who has achieved a just popularity in works of this class. They are small volumes of some 200 pages, neatly printed.

THE MERCHANTS’ MAGAZINE, for June, just issued, completes the sixth semi-annual volume of that work. Its principal papers treat of the “Commerce of Syria,” “Iron Trade of the United States,” candid and intelligent; “Voyage of Vasco de Gama” and “Canadian Commerce.” Its Commercial Statistics embody a vast amount of most valuable information for merchants, including statements of the Commerce of Bengal, Havana, Jamaica, &c., with various Statistical Tables of the Cotton and other Exports of the United States. A new year commences with the next number; and we are confident that every merchant who subscribes for this work and reads it will make an excellent investment of his time and money.

THE BOSTON MISCELLANY of Literature and Fashion, for June, has just been issued by Bradbury, Soden & Co. and a good one it is. We have read three of the stories—two of them good; one we have marked for our Weekly.

THE DEMOCRATIC REVIEW for June contains articles on James’ and Cooper’s Naval Histories, the Early Life of Jeremy Bentham, Association and Attractive Industry, Goethe, Choruses from the Greek Tragedies, The Rhode Island Affair, (courteous and plausible, but suppressing many essential facts and considerations.) The embellishment is a likeness of Bulwer. It is a fair number.

THE PEOPLE’S MAGAZINE, No. 9 for June, completes Miss Landen’s romance of “Ethel Churchill,” and commences D’Israeli’s famous “Vivian Grey.” It has a Portrait of D’Israeli, L. Post, 38 Broadway.

BY GREELEY & McELRATH.

VOL. II. NO. 45.

ASSOCIATION;
Or, Principles of a True Organization of Society.

The editorship of this column is distinct from that of the Tribune, address letters, post-paid, to A. BRISBANE, Residence, 76 Leonard street.

THE TRIBUNE.

Glances at the Senate.—No. 5.

THOMAS H. BENTON of Missouri enjoys no sort of consideration at Washington commensurate with the swell he raises at a distance. In person he is gross, burly and of countenance most unimpressive; in manner pompous and inflated; in matter empty; in conceit a giant; in influence a cipher. He manifests considerable shrewdness in his appeals to popular ignorance and the lower instincts of humanity—witness his late attack on the Whigs concerning $40,000 worth of books which were purchased and distributed by the last Low-Face Congress. Statesmanship is not in him; even in negotiation and destruction he but follows instinct, not, like Calhoun, a theory. His great hobby is to be the hardest Hard-Money man and the bluntest anti-Protectionist in Congress.—By those who know him well, he is not esteemed, even apart from politics, a man of moral honesty. As a debater in the Senate he has no force; his principal forte being the parading in the Globe of heavy columns of statistics and figures of which he comprehends neither the bearing nor the force.

Col. Benton served in the last War, and was then involved in a ferocious feud with Gen. Jackson, who assailed him with pistols in his hotel in Nashville with a savagery which no provocation could justify. Several shots were fired by the parties on either side, but no one was dangerously wounded, and the fight was ended by the discharge of all the pistols carried by either party. The feud continued, however, at least as late as 1824, when Benton publicly proclaimed that, if Jackson were chosen President, Members of Congress would be forced to legislate with pistols in their belts. Col. Benton was, throughout the contest of 1824, a supporter of Mr. Clay for President, and a member of the Clay Central Committee of Missouri. Soon after the election of Mr. Adams, however, he united in the heterogeneous condition which rallied under the banners of Jackson and Calhoun, and has ever since been a drill-sargent among them. In 1827 he was a member of the famous Committee of Retrenchment which reported that the Government was shamefully extravagant in its expenditure of Thirteen Millions per annum, and that its patronage and expenses might be greatly reduced. About the same time he wrote to the Richmond Enquirer a startling account of the gorgeous furniture of the President’s House, and especially of the great East Room—said room being at that time not furnished at all. This is but an everyday leaf from the volume of his life.

Mr. Benton came into the Senate upon the admission of Missouri into the Union—10-21—and has been three times reelected; so that he is now the oldest constant possessor of a seat in the Senate, unless Mr. King of Alabama may share with him the distinction. In this fortune he has been favored by the character of his constituency, forming the vanguard and skirmishers of Western progress; many of them relying on the documents he sends them for their political information, and scarcely seeing any beside. He understands the art of speaking and legislating “for Bumcombe,” and his Preemption and Graduation projects are exactly calculated to extend and deepen his popularity on the wild prairies of Missouri. Around St. Louis he is better known. Of late years, however, he has hardly visited Missouri at all, remaining with his family near Washington from Session to Session, taking care to charge ample mileage for his consecutive journeys back and forward—sometimes charging around by New-Orleans in order to swell his emoluments by a round thousand. That such a man contrives to preserve a reputation among even a moderate portion of our countrymen is considerably less creditable than amazing. But,

“It is distance lends enchantment to the view.”

Cousin Lucy on the Sea-Shore.—By the Author of “The Roll-Boats.” Appleton, 200 Broadway.

Cousin Lucy among the Mountains.—By the same.

These are two clever stories descriptive of Life and Nature, by one who has achieved a just popularity in works of this class. They are small volumes of some 200 pages, neatly printed.

THE MERCHANTS’ MAGAZINE, for June, just issued, completes the sixth semi-annual volume of that work. Its principal papers treat of the “Commerce of Syria,” “Iron Trade of the United States,” candid and intelligent; “Voyage of Vasco de Gama” and “Canadian Commerce.” Its Commercial Statistics embody a vast amount of most valuable information for merchants, including statements of the Commerce of Bengal, Havana, Jamaica, &c., with various Statistical Tables of the Cotton and other Exports of the United States. A new year commences with the next number; and we are confident that every merchant who subscribes for this work and reads it will make an excellent investment of his time and money.

THE BOSTON MISCELLANY of Literature and Fashion, for June, has just been issued by Bradbury, Soden & Co. and a good one it is. We have read three of the stories—two of them good; one we have marked for our Weekly.

THE DEMOCRATIC REVIEW for June contains articles on James’ and Cooper’s Naval Histories, the Early Life of Jeremy Bentham, Association and Attractive Industry, Goethe, Choruses from the Greek Tragedies, The Rhode Island Affair, (courteous and plausible, but suppressing many essential facts and considerations.) The embellishment is a likeness of Bulwer. It is a fair number.

THE PEOPLE’S MAGAZINE, No. 9 for June, completes Miss Landen’s romance of “Ethel Churchill,” and commences D’Israeli’s famous “Vivian Grey.” It has a Portrait of D’Israeli, L. Post, 38 Broadway.

BY GREELEY & McELRATH.

VOL. II. NO. 45.

ASSOCIATION;
Or, Principles of a True Organization of Society.

The editorship of this column is distinct from that of the Tribune, address letters, post-paid, to A. BRISBANE, Residence, 76 Leonard street.

THE TRIBUNE.

Glances at the Senate.—No. 5.

THOMAS H. BENTON of Missouri enjoys no sort of consideration at Washington commensurate with the swell he raises at a distance. In person he is gross, burly and of countenance most unimpressive; in manner pompous and inflated; in matter empty; in conceit a giant; in influence a cipher. He manifests considerable shrewdness in his appeals to popular ignorance and the lower instincts of humanity—witness his late attack on the Whigs concerning $40,000 worth of books which were purchased and distributed by the last Low-Face Congress. Statesmanship is not in him; even in negotiation and destruction he but follows instinct, not, like Calhoun, a theory. His great hobby is to be the hardest Hard-Money man and the bluntest anti-Protectionist in Congress.—By those who know him well, he is not esteemed, even apart from politics, a man of moral honesty. As a debater in the Senate he has no force; his principal forte being the parading in the Globe of heavy columns of statistics and figures of which he comprehends neither the bearing nor the force.

Col. Benton served in the last War, and was then involved in a ferocious feud with Gen. Jackson, who assailed him with pistols in his hotel in Nashville with a savagery which no provocation could justify. Several shots were fired by the parties on either side, but no one was dangerously wounded, and the fight was ended by the discharge of all the pistols carried by either party. The feud continued, however, at least as late as 1824, when Benton publicly proclaimed that, if Jackson were chosen President, Members of Congress would be forced to legislate with pistols in their belts. Col. Benton was, throughout the contest of 1824, a supporter of Mr. Clay for President, and a member of the Clay Central Committee of Missouri. Soon after the election of Mr. Adams, however, he united in the heterogeneous condition which rallied under the banners of Jackson and Calhoun, and has ever since been a drill-sargent among them. In 1827 he was a member of the famous Committee of Retrenchment which reported that the Government was shamefully extravagant in its expenditure of Thirteen Millions per annum, and that its patronage and expenses might be greatly reduced. About the same time he wrote to the Richmond Enquirer a startling account of the gorgeous furniture of the President’s House, and especially of the great East Room—said room being at that time not furnished at all. This is but an everyday leaf from the volume of his life.

Mr. Benton came into the Senate upon the admission of Missouri into the Union—10-21—and has been three times reelected; so that he is now the oldest constant possessor of a seat in the Senate, unless Mr. King of Alabama may share with him the distinction. In this fortune he has been favored by the character of his constituency, forming the vanguard and skirmishers of Western progress; many of them relying on the documents he sends them for their political information, and scarcely seeing any beside. He understands the art of speaking and legislating “for Bumcombe,” and his Preemption and Graduation projects are exactly calculated to extend and deepen his popularity on the wild prairies of Missouri. Around St. Louis he is better known. Of late years, however, he has hardly visited Missouri at all, remaining with his family near Washington from Session to Session, taking care to charge ample mileage for his consecutive journeys back and forward—sometimes charging around by New-Orleans in order to swell his emoluments by a round thousand. That such a man contrives to preserve a reputation among even a moderate portion of our countrymen is considerably less creditable than amazing. But,

“It is distance lends enchantment to the view.”

Cousin Lucy on the Sea-Shore.—By the Author of “The Roll-Boats.” Appleton, 200 Broadway.

Cousin Lucy among the Mountains.—By the same.

These are two clever stories descriptive of Life and Nature, by one who has achieved a just popularity in works of this class. They are small volumes of some 200 pages, neatly printed.

THE MERCHANTS’ MAGAZINE, for June, just issued, completes the sixth semi-annual volume of that work. Its principal papers treat of the “Commerce of Syria,” “Iron Trade of the United States,” candid and intelligent; “Voyage of Vasco de Gama” and “Canadian Commerce.” Its Commercial Statistics embody a vast amount of most valuable information for merchants, including statements of the Commerce of Bengal, Havana, Jamaica, &c., with various Statistical Tables of the Cotton and other Exports of the United States. A new year commences with the next number; and we are confident that every merchant who subscribes for this work and reads it will make an excellent investment of his time and money.

THE BOSTON MISCELLANY of Literature and Fashion, for June, has just been issued by Bradbury, Soden & Co. and a good one it is. We have read three of the stories—two of them good; one we have marked for our Weekly.

THE DEMOCRATIC REVIEW for June contains articles on James’ and Cooper’s Naval Histories, the Early Life of Jeremy Bentham, Association and Attractive Industry, Goethe, Choruses from the Greek Tragedies, The Rhode Island Affair, (courteous and plausible, but suppressing many essential facts and considerations.) The embellishment is a likeness of Bulwer. It is a fair number.

THE PEOPLE’S MAGAZINE, No. 9 for June, completes Miss Landen’s romance of “Ethel Churchill,” and commences D’Israeli’s famous “Vivian Grey.” It has a Portrait of D’Israeli, L. Post, 38 Broadway.

BY GREELEY & McELRATH.

VOL. II. NO. 45.

ASSOCIATION;
Or, Principles of a True Organization of Society.

The editorship of this column is distinct from that of the Tribune, address letters, post-paid, to A. BRISBANE, Residence, 76 Leonard street.

THE TRIBUNE.

Glances at the Senate.—No. 5.

THOMAS H. BENTON of Missouri enjoys no sort of consideration at Washington commensurate with the swell he raises at a distance. In person he is gross, burly and of countenance most unimpressive; in manner pompous and inflated; in matter empty; in conceit a giant; in influence a cipher. He manifests considerable shrewdness in his appeals to popular ignorance and the lower instincts of humanity—witness his late attack on the Whigs concerning $40,000 worth of books which were purchased and distributed by the last Low-Face Congress. Statesmanship is not in him; even in negotiation and destruction he but follows instinct, not, like Calhoun, a theory. His great hobby is to be the hardest Hard-Money man and the bluntest anti-Protectionist in Congress.—By those who know him well, he is not esteemed, even apart from politics, a man of moral honesty. As a debater in the Senate he has no force; his principal forte being the parading in the Globe of heavy columns of statistics and figures of which he comprehends neither the bearing nor the force.

Col. Benton served in the last War, and was then involved in a ferocious feud with Gen. Jackson, who assailed him with pistols in his hotel in Nashville with a savagery which no provocation could justify. Several shots were fired by the parties on either side, but no one was dangerously wounded, and the fight was ended by the discharge of all the pistols carried by either party. The feud continued, however, at least as late as 1824, when Benton publicly proclaimed that, if Jackson were chosen President, Members of Congress would be forced to legislate with pistols in their belts. Col. Benton was, throughout the contest of 1824, a supporter of Mr. Clay for President, and a member of the Clay Central Committee of Missouri. Soon after the election of Mr. Adams, however, he united in the heterogeneous condition which rallied under the banners of Jackson and Calhoun, and has ever since been a drill-sargent among them. In 1827 he was a member of the famous Committee of Retrenchment which reported that the Government was shamefully extravagant in its expenditure of Thirteen Millions per annum, and that its patronage and expenses might be greatly reduced. About the same time he wrote to the Richmond Enquirer a startling account of the gorgeous furniture of the President’s House, and especially of the great East Room—said room being at that time not furnished at all. This is but an everyday leaf from the volume of his life.

Mr. Benton came into the Senate upon the admission of Missouri into the Union—10-21—and has been three times reelected; so that he is now the oldest constant possessor of a seat in the Senate, unless Mr. King of Alabama may share with him the distinction. In this fortune he has been favored by the character of his constituency, forming the vanguard and skirmishers of Western progress; many of them relying on the documents he sends them for their political information, and scarcely seeing any beside. He understands the art of speaking and legislating “for Bumcombe,” and his Preemption and Graduation projects are exactly calculated to extend and deepen his popularity on the wild prairies of Missouri. Around St. Louis he is better known. Of late years, however, he has hardly visited Missouri at all, remaining with his family near Washington from Session to Session, taking care to charge ample mileage for his consecutive journeys back and forward—sometimes charging around by New-Orleans in order to swell his emoluments by a round thousand. That such a man contrives to preserve a reputation among even a moderate portion of our countrymen is considerably less creditable than amazing. But,

“It is distance lends enchantment to the view.”

Cousin Lucy on the Sea-Shore.—By the Author of “The Roll-Boats.” Appleton, 200 Broadway.

Cousin Lucy among the Mountains.—By the same.

These are two clever stories descriptive of Life and Nature, by one who has achieved a just popularity in works of this class. They are small volumes of some 200 pages, neatly printed.

THE MERCHANTS’ MAGAZINE, for June, just issued, completes the sixth semi-annual volume of that work. Its principal papers treat of the “Commerce of Syria,” “Iron Trade of the United States,” candid and intelligent; “Voyage of Vasco de Gama” and “Canadian Commerce.” Its Commercial Statistics embody a vast amount of most valuable information for merchants, including statements of the Commerce of Bengal, Havana, Jamaica, &c., with various Statistical Tables of the Cotton and other Exports of the United States. A new year commences with the next number; and we are confident that every merchant who subscribes for this work and reads it will make an excellent investment of his time and money.

THE BOSTON MISCELLANY of Literature and Fashion, for June, has just been issued by Bradbury, Soden & Co. and a good one it is. We have read three of the stories—two of them good; one we have marked for our Weekly.

THE DEMOCRATIC REVIEW for June contains articles on James’ and Cooper’s Naval Histories, the Early Life of Jeremy Bentham, Association and Attractive Industry, Goethe, Choruses from the Greek Tragedies, The Rhode Island Affair, (courteous and plausible, but suppressing many essential facts and considerations.) The embellishment is a likeness of Bulwer. It is a fair number.

THE PEOPLE’S MAGAZINE, No. 9 for June, completes Miss Landen’s romance of “Ethel Churchill,” and commences D’Israeli’s famous “Vivian Grey.” It has a Portrait of D’Israeli, L. Post, 38 Broadway.